Business description

Recruit Jobs is a company that provides services for the Recruit Group's HR business segment, focusing on recruiting services that cover all employment styles including part-time jobs, temporary staffing jobs, and full-time employment. Our Travaille magazine, first published in 1980, changed the way people in Japan view female employment by suggesting new work styles for women. From our inaugural issue of FromA magazine in 1982, we further influenced the way the public thinks of part-time work by presenting these jobs as a lifestyle choice. Since then, we have continued to develop new services that match job-seekers with employers across Japan. For example, our service TOWNWORK is currently distributed in 100 regional editions across Japan as of February 2017 to provide a media channel that helps to bring together people with companies in their respective local communities. Meanwhile, our Hatalike job search site places emphasis on the candidate's personality and attributes rather than limiting the focus to obvious criteria such as work experience or skills. In addition to these traditional services, we also offer services that support our users' work experience and our clients' recruitment and employment process, such as Shift Board – a shift management app for shift workers – and Jobuopu – a job application management system for employers.

At Recruit Jobs, "JOBS ACTION" is used as a collective term for our vision of the future that we are aiming to achieve, our promise to the general public, and our promise to ourselves. This challenge reflects our commitment to developing a world in which people can take their future into their own hands based on a strong relationship between work and individual.
